The King's Fund Library Database is the online catalogue for the The King's Fund Library Service. The collection holds material focused on health and social care policy and management, primarily in the United Kingdom. It contains a unique collection of grey literature (reports, papers government documents, etc) as well as journal articles, books and relevant websites. The database is updated on a daily basis and it holds material from 1897 right through to present day. The Library Database provides access to valuable resources covering the history of the health service in England from the beginnings of a National Health Service through to the very latest developments.

Basic search

Enter your search into the search box at the top of the screen. Entering your search terms into the database will bring up results containing all the words you have entered.

Viewing your results

The results of a search are displayed below the search box. Click on the title for the abstract/description of the record:

If the item is available freely online, we will provide a link in the record:

If no link is available or if the link is broken, we may hold a print copy of the item. In this case, please contact the team for help.

Reading lists

Our curated reading lists provide useful introductions to popular topics in health and social care. You can access the reading lists from navigation bar at the top of the Library Database.

Advanced search

Phrase searching

Use quotation marks to search for a specific phrase.

For example, putting the search terms "workforce planning" into quotation marks will narrow the above search to find only results where the words "workforce planning" appear together as a phrase.

Combining search terms

You may combine search terms to enhance and improve your search results. Combining your search words and phrases using the words AND, OR, NOT (known as Boolean operators) to limit, broaden, or define your search.

Using AND

Entering your search terms and/or phrases into the search box will bring up search results where all these terms appear.

You don't need to include AND for these types of searches but if you prefer to include this, please ensure you enter your Boolean operator in capitals:

Home > Advanced search > Results of s	earch for "workforce planning", page 1 of 10
Refine your search Your s	earch returned 997 results. 👩

Using OR

Separating your search words and/or phrases with OR will bring up search results where at least one of those words and/or phrases appears.

The Kings Fund>	🛱 Cart 🖽 Lists 👻	Log in to your account Search history Clear
	Got a question? Please use our enquiry form.

Advanced search I	library
Home > Advanced sear	ch > Results of search for "digital exclusion" OR "digital divide" OR "digita	al inclusion", page 1 of 2
Refine your search	Your search returned 168 results.

Using NOT

Separating your search words and/or phrases with NOT will exclude any search results with the terms after NOT. For example, the following search would bring up search results on workforce planning but not about workforce planning and nurses:

Truncation

An asterisk can be used at the end of a word to truncate your search term. For example, searching regulat* brings up search results featuring words starting with regulat, e.g. regulate, regulates, regulation, regulations

Alternative spellings

A question mark stands in for one character, so it can be used to ensure you pick up a word with alternative spellings. For example, searching for organi?ation will bring up search results that contain the terms organisation and organization.

Please note that you cannot use asterisks * or question marks ? within quotations, since quotation marks mean you want exact matches only.

Combining Boolean search operators

You can combine different Boolean search operators to ensure that your search terms bring up results that are more specific and to narrow down the number of search results you receive.

For example, searching for "workforce planning" AND nurs* brings up search results where workforce planning appears alongside words that begin with nurs (e.g. nurse, nurses, nursing)

Subject headings

Subject headings are a useful way to search for items on a particular topic. When an item is added to the database, it is tagged (or indexed) with relevant subject headings so that you can search using these.

When you carry out a basic search on the Library Database you will see a list of topics (these are known as subject headings) on the left-hand side of the screen next to the results. These can be used to find suggested subjected headings for you to search with.

Exporting your search results

If you wish to export your results for use in a reference manager, download them as a spreadsheet or email them to yourself, you can do so through the cart function on the Library Database. There are two ways to add items to your cart:

Adding a single item to your cart

To add a single item to your cart, use the Add to cart button on the relevant record:

Adding multiple items to your cart

To add multiple items to your cart, use the checkboxes to select the items and the Add to button to add the items to your cart:

Please note that as search results are limited to 100 per screen, you will need to save your selections to the cart before moving on to the next screen of search results.

Once added, your results are accessible by clicking on the cart icon at the top of the screen:

From here, you can download your results to a reference manager or to a spreadsheet (CSV format) or email them to yourself.

Saving your searches

When you search on the database it creates permanent link for the search you have carried out. When you are happy with your search, you can bookmark the link to revisit the search or you may share the link with others. As the database is continually updated, new results that match your search will appear in any saved searches.
